

THE
NEW YORK TIMES
STYLE
MAGAZINE

Women's Fashion
February 16, 2014

THE WOMAN Phoebe Philo's
Prophetic Fashion
WHO KNOWS
The Surreal Mind of
Matthew Barney
WHAT WOMEN WANT Five Novelists
on the Rooms
Where They Write

Lookout

This and That

A CLEAN, WELL-LIGHTED PLACE (1) Kacper Dolatowski's plaster torchiere lamp, $5,500. (2) Billy Cotton's parchment console, $18,800. (3) Matthias Merkel Hess's glazed ceramic "White Bucket, Small," $600. (4) Jed Ochmanek's concrete artwork, $2,100. (5) Maren Kloppmann's black-and-white porcelain vessel, $4,200. (6) Robert Stiller's brass sconce, $3,000. (7) Cotton's Elements table, $38,800, and (8) Cotton's Antwerp cabinet, $28,000, exclusively through Ferrer.

THE FIND

Studio Services

After achieving success on the West Coast as one half of the furniture design duo Meier/Ferrer, Charlie Ferrer has branched out on his own and opened a meticulously curated Manhattan showroom that also doubles as his one-bedroom apartment. The 32-year-old has pooled pieces by a number of behind-the-scenes talents, like the sought-after industrial designer Billy Cotton and the lighting expert Kacper Dolatowski, both of whose work had only been available to decorators seeking custom commissions. The handmade designs Ferrer displays, in a range of materials from brass to oak to plaster, feel classic yet current. "I don't like to call it a showroom, which feels static," Ferrer says. "It's really more of a studio, an active place where artists refine, resolve and share their ideas." ferrer.co

—SARA RUFFIN COSTELLO

SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT

Moncler Gamme Rouge

Knotted loose and low around the hips, a graphic knit becomes a butt-flattering train.

Tying the Knot

Spring's runway proved — surprise, surprise — that there's more than one way to wear a sweater.

Chanel

Worn backwards around the waist, this nonchalant bad-girl look is the sartorial equivalent of smoking in the bathroom.

Céline

Preppy or Maasai? Either way, an asymmetrically tied knit serves up a fresh twist on the tennis ensemble.

DKNY

The Houdini of fashion, a sweater cinched high on the waist creates the illusion of a slimmer figure and longer legs.

FERRER: JOSHUA MCHUGH (3); ILLUSTRATIONS BY KONSTANTIN KAMARIAS.